

MP-29 "Some Random Photos" July 8th, 2001

Wooden ties - something you rarely see in Tokyo now, as all the lines have switched to concrete. The door of a temple and the light making its own art in a cheap lens (the money you pay for most digital cameras goes for the electronics, not the optics!).

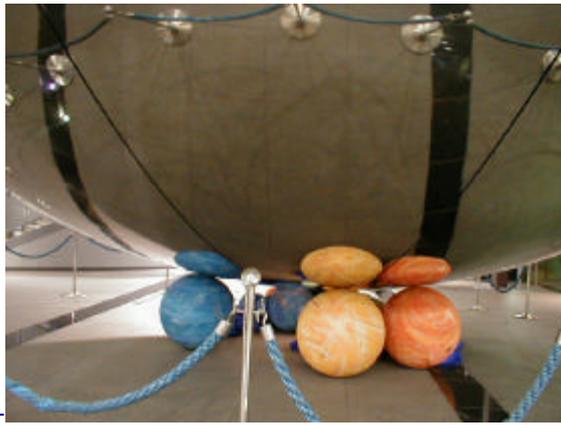

Sights like this are almost as "exotic" for the locals as they are for tourists... Blurs through a nighttime train window... these are the typical sights for... a majority(?) of people living in Tokyo. In the office all day, in a restaurant with friends now and again after work, and then the trains....

Typical daylight scenes...

Toyota Showroom.

The Toyota Movie-bubble in Ikebukuro.

"The Great Buddha" in Kamakura.
