

MP-24 "The Corner"

The view I had at my old seat - the passageway that virtually everyone in the office has to pass through. The Prez's office is on the right side - conference room on the left. The main work area is just past the reddish semi-cubicle on the left. (Right side..... my office computer with several of my own parts being installed.)

Beautiful Shinjuku..... Notice that when I say I'm sitting in the corner now, I really do mean exactly what I say! The steel door on the right leads into the emergency stairwell/storage area. Notice that copy machine... a constant source of irritation as there is someone standing just behind me almost all the time. That window knocked my monitor off of my desk last week - before I moved it over to the far right of the desk..

My new view to the left. The weather has been nice lately, so (now that my computer is out of the way), when the window is fully open, my view of the world is something like this... which is cool, but would be so much better if only that copy machine were not so close behind me!

Copyright 2001 Lyle (Hiroshi) Saxon (April 8th, 2001)